Overview uses the same top 380 pt of each page at the same scale. All invoice content is shown.

The complete original A4 PDFs follow on pages 2 and 3, with their page content unchanged.

Inspect the details.

Check date wrapping, table columns, amounts, line weights and spacing. Zoom into the vector pages to inspect the actual output.

Then test your own PDF.

This is one static invoice with JavaScript disabled. It is not a guarantee of identical output for every template or option, and it contains no speed measurement.

How this example was made

20 November 2026 | Source, versions and limits

Input

The same unchanged invoice.html file was supplied to both programs. Northwind Supplies, Acme Trading and all invoice details are fictional fixture data.

Renderers

wkhtmltopdf 0.12.6 (with patched qt)
marqius-wkhtmltopdf 0.12.6

Environment

Both programs ran in the same Linux ARM64 container with the same installed fonts and networking disabled. Arial resolved to Arial.ttf: "Arial" "Regular".

Common options

-q --page-size A4 --encoding utf-8
--margin-top 10 --margin-right 10
--margin-bottom 10 --margin-left 10
--disable-javascript invoice.html output.pdf

What the booklet preserves

The overview embeds the actual PDF page content at the same scale and crop. Pages 2 and 3 contain the original full pages. No text, amounts or layout were retouched to make the outputs agree.

What it does not establish

This one invoice does not test JavaScript, every CLI option, unusual CSS, every font or a customer's templates. There is no performance or universal parity claim. Render representative documents and inspect them before switching production.
